

Ski tour Johannisberg, 3.453 m

Details of the tour:

Altitude difference: 1.100 hm

Walking time: 5,5 hours

Starting point: Franz-Josef-Höhe on the Glockner Road

Maximum steepness: Up to 35 degrees, depending on conditions.

Tour time: May and June

Highlight: Glacier tour in the Großglockner area with a view of the Kaprun reservoirs.

Route: From Franz-Josefs-Höhe through the tunnels on the path Hofmannshütte - Oberwalderhütte. At the end of the path you enter the glacier. Up over the southern Bockkarkees and north past the Oberwalderhütte (2,972 m, winter room). Short descent and now head directly towards the Johannisberg. Best directly over the east ridge or just left (south) of it to the summit. Frequent crevasses, so a rope should be used when there is little snow!

Descent: With sufficient snow cover, the descent directly through the Hufeisenbruch down to the Pasterze is possible (counter ascent of about 20 min. at the glacier lift).

Keep left on the descent, as the better conditions are usually found here. In the central part, the rope should not be dispensed with.

Weather info: Find out about the weather situation in the touring area before each tour, e.g. at www.wetter.orf.at or www.zamg.at Avalanche information: Before each tour, find out about the current avalanche situation in the touring area, e.g. at www.lawine.salzburg.at.

In any case, avoid ski tours when there is a warning for avalanche danger.

The use of this tour description is at your own risk. A liability for any accidents and damages is not assumed for any legal reason.